GLEN BOLOFSKY, CEO

According to techcrunch.com, startup parking ticket fighting service FIXED, that had made a big splash about a year ago, announced they can no longer fight tickets because the City of San Francisco put up fake, electronic barriers, obstructing due process; crippling them.

While bureaucrats might be celebrating, their actions against FIXED appear less than honest and fair. In fact, parkingticket.com founder and CEO, a fierce competitor of FIXED wants FIXED to fight on. And being the founder of the first website in the world to fight tickets in 2001, he's offering FIXED both financial and legal support.

"What I never liked is the way our municipalities rob people blind with illegal tickets and act unreasonably, arbitrarily and capriciously in their quest to meet their budgets. The other thing I never liked is a quitter", parkingticket.com CEO Bolofsky says.

"If the allegations made by FIXED against San Francisco are true we need to help FIXED get this fixed, in a hurry!"
